6 TDM.Q: iPhone: how to create crash report I'm creating an app that was rejected by apple. In my case it was a lot of parse issue. Parsing the same json is still happening, the app crashes but with new code I assume it would not crash. How can I create a crash report which is valid for ios 4.2? I have read about the online crash-report-generator at I did not test it, but it looks like they use some weird way to make the crash reports. Any suggestions on what is the best way? A: One of the options is to use UIApplicationDelegate and add a - (BOOL)application:(UIApplication *)application handleOpenURL:(NSURL *)url method that will extract the crash report from the crash. Here you can check if the URL matches the format

If it does, you can extract it with a standard crash kit tool (we use plcrash) and upload it to It will then be sent to you as email, or if you have the report and the link, you can send it to Apple directly. And here is the document to help you with the details of sending it. Q: How do you get the first value that was found in a comparator inside of a foreach Loop I am trying to just get the first value of the total that is output in my foreach loop. protected void

Growth and performance of commercial rainbow trout (Oncorhynchus mykiss) and brook trout (Salvelinus fontinalis) to adipocyte growth and aromatase induction. The adipose tissue is key to the growth and reproductive success of a range of fish species. To study its development, growth and nutritional regulation we have characterized both native brook trout and commercial rainbow trout to adipocyte growth and aromatase induction. Concentrations of the adipocyte growth stimulator IGF-I were dramatically higher in rainbow trout than brook trout, and stimulation of adipose tissue growth and aromatase induction by IGF-I was more effective in brook trout compared with rainbow trout. These findings suggest that rainbow trout is a poorer growth model for the understanding of the mechanisms controlling adipocyte growth and aromatase induction than brook trout.
