4. 8 1. Nicely displayed, well-balanced presentation of photo. Despite the subject being one of the least commonly encountered in the mountains, it reveals much about the time and conditions required for the area to have been exposed. I am looking forward to hearing about the images. I had hoped that this would offer a more detailed look at the subject in question. (e.g. other peaks, walls etc.) A bit disappointing, as the black and white print does nothing to illustrate the darkness of the rock. By the way, I was curious as to how many of you guys had played with the new 'mystery' that's been offered up in the forum today. I was one of the lucky ones that received it early! Thanks to Sam Smith for bringing it to our attention. We try to make sure we have at least one mystery per week. Before the state of the art in photoshop, we also have done posters, newsletters, and even stowed away a poster in a person's name at the entrance of a place for them to find upon arrival. We also have a live version of the poster in our car! How fun! I'd like to see a live version of this myself sometime! I have really enjoyed doing this, as I've gotten to meet people like you and mine because of it. Sam Smith You will find more photoshop masters over on the Pixel Camera forums, as that was the backbone of how we did it, but we've upgraded so much since then that this is no longer accurate. I've been a bit delayed in replying to your thread in my search for some amazing photobombs. The latest build I have, is 08.02.2019 and I'll be posting my entries very soon. As I have also posted on the forums that I can be reached through "talk" in the forums. And finally, to help in identifying the mystery I'll be asking for each of the following questions with a link back to the thread. Here's a start: "Does this resemble the one you are trying to find" or "Does the last image at this link resemble the one you are trying to find" I know, it's a long one, but hopefully, it will give a helping hand to you as well as me! I have a lot of your older 82157476af
